Krabi, a hidden wonder on the Andaman Sea which is being discovered in a big and significant way, is about 820 kilometres south of Bangkok.

It is straddled by 160-kilometres-long coastline and long rugged mountain range, and surrounded by 130 islands, isles and islets, large and small. The famous Phi Phi Islands also belong to Krabi Province, although they are more associated with Phuket, Krabi's neighbour in the Andaman Sea.

Krabi is also home to the ancient civilization and a testimony to geological evolution, with the 75-million-year shell fossil by the sea, formed by millions of clear water mollusks with their shells cemented together as a huge slab washed by waves from the ocean.

Krabi is a true unspoilt pearl of the Andaman Sea.

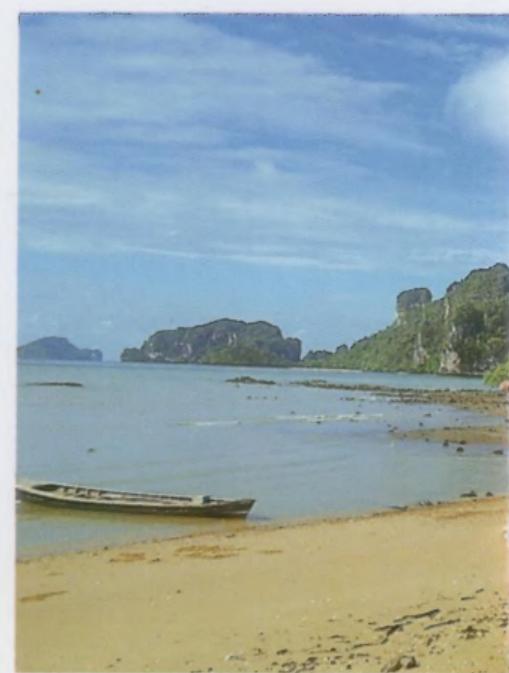

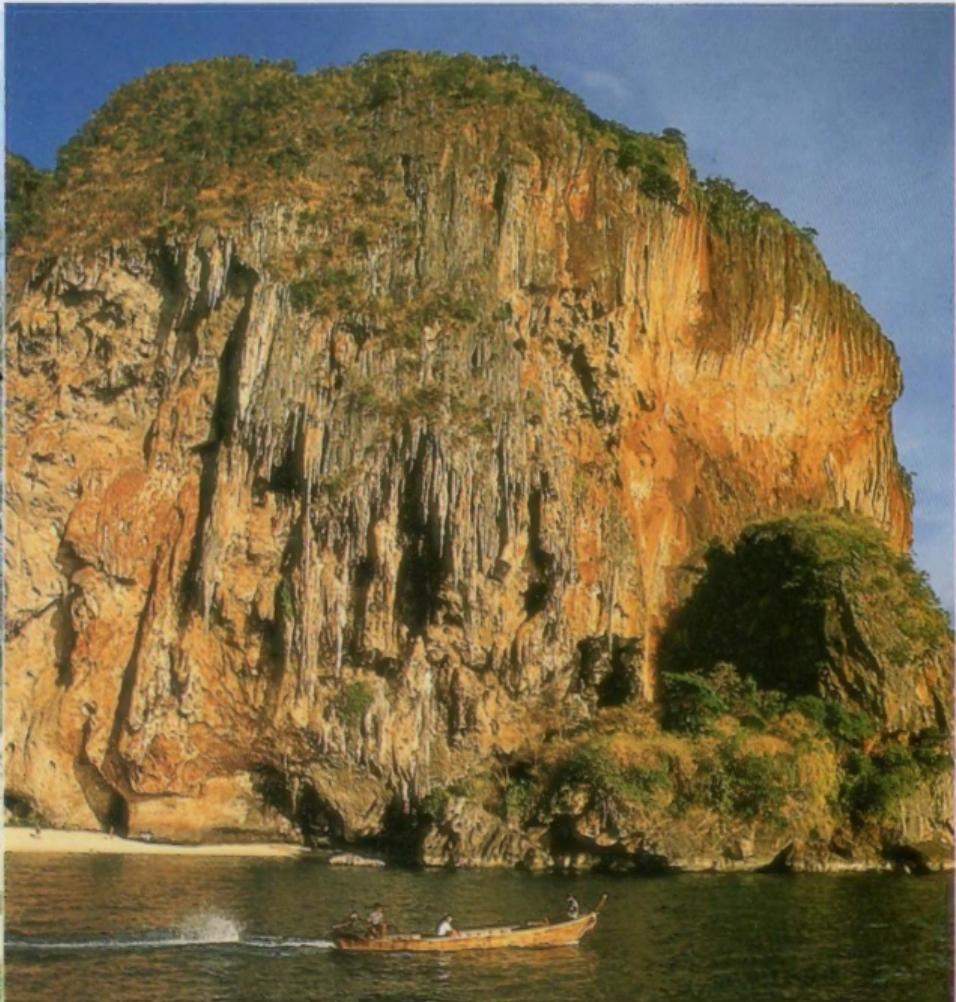

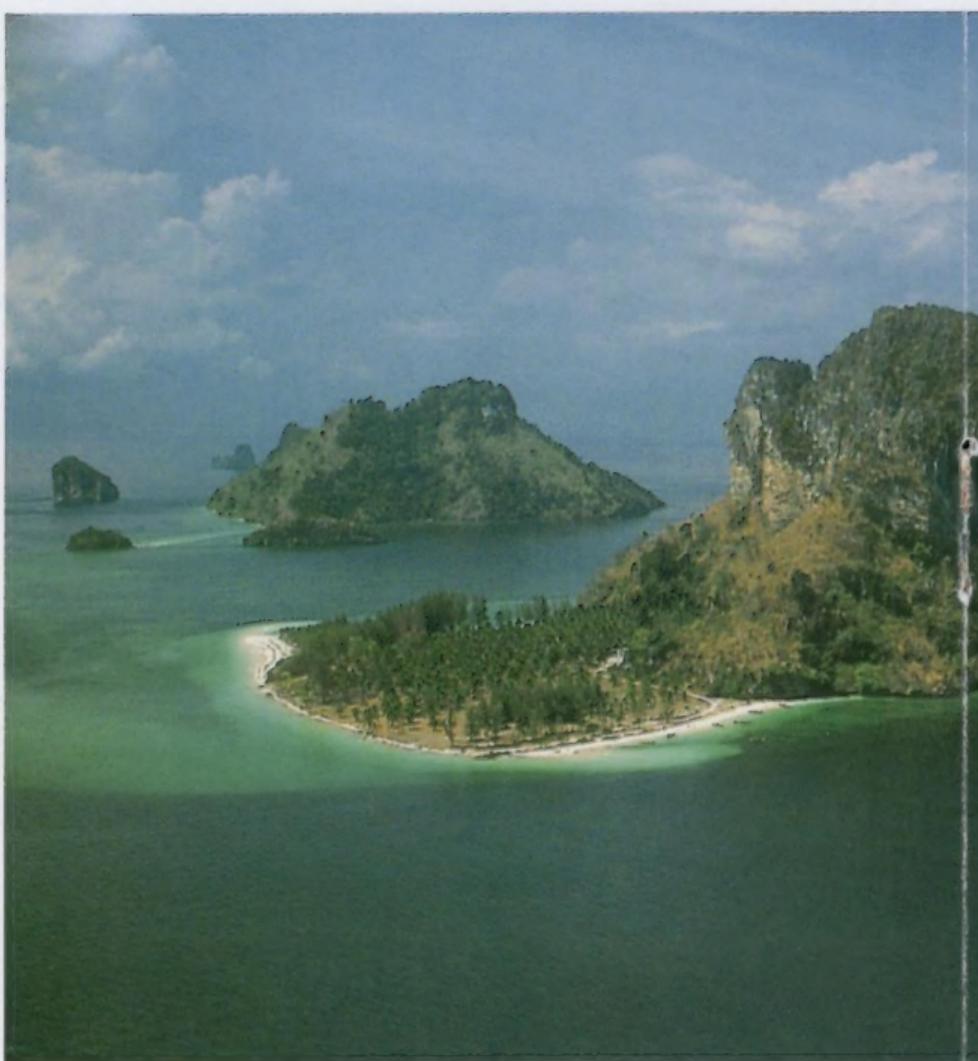

Visitors to Krabi head for the Phra Nang Bay, the focal point of interest for tourists, with all the features identified with Krabi and the Andaman region. White sandy beaches, rock formations, islets and coral reef form up the area, with limestone caves are waiting to be explored. Famous attractions are Phra Nang Cave, Noparat Thara Beach, and rich undersea empire, there are amuse for scuba diving enthusiasts.

Phra Nang Bay is rich in legends and tales. Odd-shaped rockheads and islets are linked to the legend involving the use of black magic and petrified persons and objects. They look convincing and cause fantasy to run wild.

For archeologists and historians, Krabi provides a clue to many unanswered questions in human civilizations and maritime history back dated to 30,000 years ago.

From near and far, wondrous sight of isles and islets come into full view, against the clear blue sky. White sandy beaches around the isles are constantly washed by azure sea. Pristine nature can still be experienced, on land and in the ocean. Across from Phra Nang Bay and Nopparat Thara Beach, varied and changing natural scenes of the isles and islets, Po Da Isle, Hua Khwan Isle (chicken island), inland lakes, and small waterfalls remain to be explored. Rare birds can be spotted in the serenity of the seafront jungle.

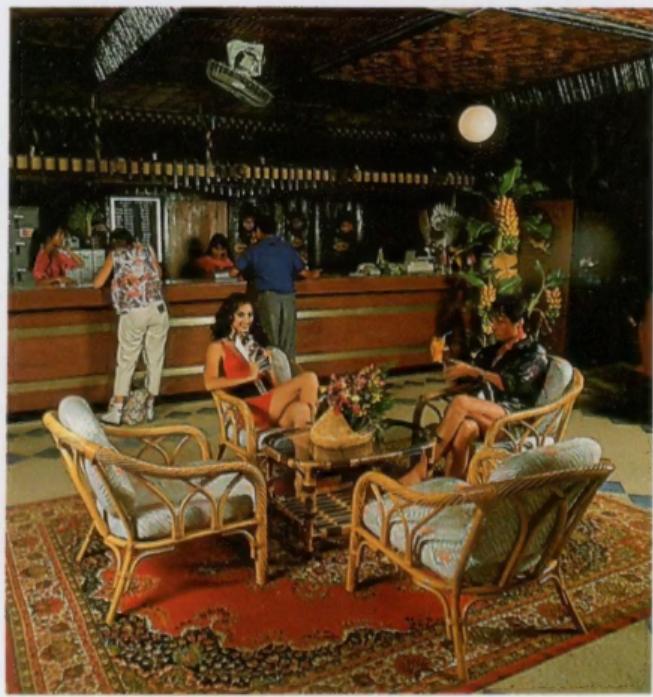

The picturesque and peaceful scenes here are such that one can feel awed by their sacredness.

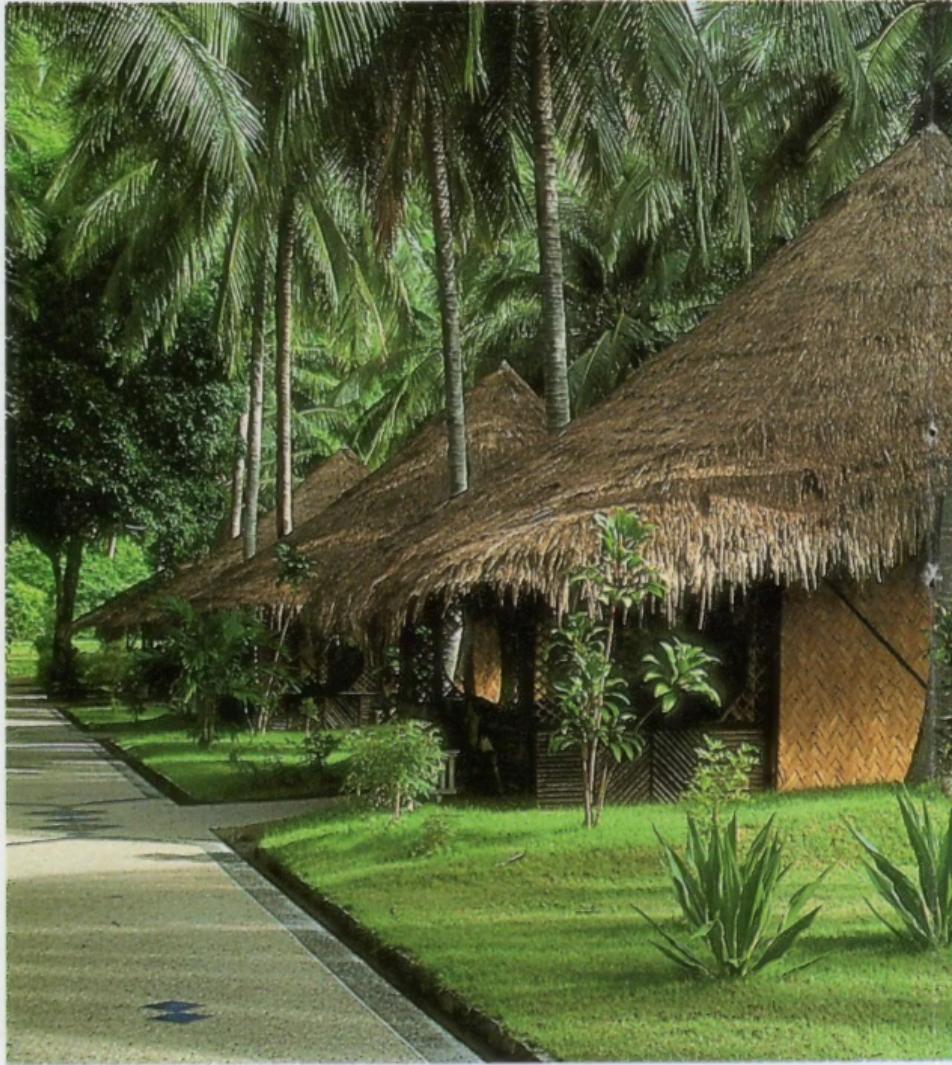

Krabi Resort is an exclusive resort on a prime property of Krabi, complete with private beaches. The luxurious 40-room hotel and 35 deluxe bungalows have been designed in accordance with the natural surroundings and contour. They are fully equipped, furnished and elaborately decorated. Air-conditioned, wall-to-wall carpeted. All rooms are furnished, with colour televisions, in-house movies, telephones, music, refrigerators, bathrooms with hot and cold shower, and private balconies or terraces.

For tourists, there are six other types of bungalows to be chosen, set in the shady palm groves, on the beachfront.
